Starting your First Job? Avoid these 12 Reputation Wreckers

Your first months at your new job are an ideal time to think about your personal brand. What are your career goals and how will a positive, mature and professional start help get you there? One way to make a great impression is to avoid some common rookie mistakes:

1. Not cleaning up your social media footprint
2. Talking about your private life
3. Showing how “green” you are
4. Spending time on non-work related activities
5. Not investing in the right work wardrobe
6. Not polishing-up your language
7. Gossiping
8. Decorating your workstation like a dorm room
9. Talking too much
10. Being late
11. Getting too friendly in the office
12. Being sloppy in your correspondence
