

New Histories of Native and Colonial North America
"New Scholar Series" on Critical Race Studies and Ethnicity

An illustrated manuscript depicting abuses of Indians on a Spanish encomienda

"Colonial New Spain as Native Dystopia: Overlooked Examples of Indigenous Resistance, Anti-imperialism, and Discontent in Early Nahuatl Sources"
~ Talk by historian Celso A. Mendoza

Historians have argued that the Nahuas or Aztecs of Mexico were not particularly resentful towards Spanish rule. Previously overlooked signs of discontent in early colonial Nahuatl texts show that, to some, colonial New Spain was a Mesoamerican dystopia.

March 19, 2021 at 8:30 to 9:45AM EST

Join Zoom Meeting:

<https://conncoll-edu.zoom.us/j/93211459029>

Celso Armando Mendoza is a nahuatlato, a scholar of Nahuatl (Aztec), writing a dissertation in History on Nahuatl annals at Rutgers Univ.

A page from the manuscript document that forms the basis of the speaker's doctoral research and his talk

Free and open to the CC campus and guests from the community.

Organized by the History Department with support from the Creating Connections Consortium (C3)

CONNECTICUT COLLEGE