

COURSES AWAITING FACULTY APPROVAL

The following courses are likely to be available for enrollment in Spring 2021, but will not be officially approved by the faculty until December 2, 2020.

SOC 3XX MEXICAN-AMERICAN COMMUNITIES

Mexican-Americans are caught in the wounded and yet codependent relationship between the United States of México and the United States of America. Through a critical sociological perspective, this course explores how Mexican-Americans experience inequality, such as class stratification, and life in social institutions, such as health, in the United States, México, at and across the border, and within decolonized frames of living.

Prerequisite: SOC 103. Four credits, enrollment limited to 18 students. Satisfies Mode E and W requirements.
