Information about courses

As a supplement to the College Catalog and the online course schedule, many faculty members have provided additional information about the format of their courses for the fall semester:

If you have additional questions, please contact the instructor directly.

Reserved Spaces in Courses

If a class was full after the initial preregistration in the spring, the instructor has been encouraged to reserve spots for the students who were initially enrolled in the class. In that situation, the instructor would temporarily restrict the course to instructor permission, giving only the initial group of students permission to enroll. Students may have received an email from the instructor letting them know that spots have been reserved. Those students will still need to sign up for the course themselves, which they should do no later than August 13. After that point, the course will be opened to all students.

If, during preregistration in August, you find that a course is unexpectedly restricted to instructor permission, it is probably because of this arrangement. Try registering for any remaining spots beginning on August 14 at noon. Please contact the instructor if you have any questions.

Timeframe for Courses

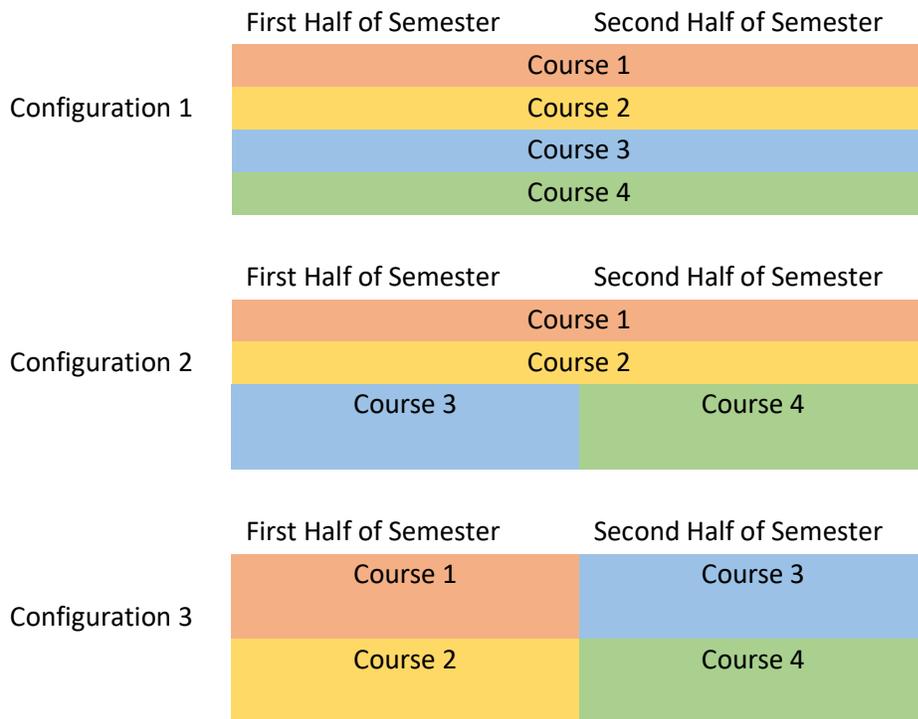

During the fall semester, courses will be offered on three basic timeframes:

1. Semester-long courses: Typically meeting twice a week, these courses will run from September 1 to December 17, with an examination period from December 18 to 22.
2. First module courses: Typically meeting four times a week, these courses will run from September 1 to October 19, with an examination period from October 20 to 22.
3. Second module courses: Typically meeting four times a week, these courses will run from October 23 to December 17, with an examination period from December 18 to 22.

Number of Courses

Full-time students are expected to complete at least four courses (16 credits) over the course of the semester. There are three standard configurations:

1. Four semester-long courses.
2. Two semester-long courses, one first module course, and one second module course.
3. Two first module courses and two second module courses.

All students, particularly incoming first-year students, are strongly advised to take courses with one of these three configurations. Students should discuss other possible configurations with their advisor and their class dean, including the possibility of taking more or fewer than four courses.

For students wishing to take more than four courses, the standard over-pointing guidelines still pertain to the number of credits taken over the entire semester. It is strongly recommended that a student taking one modular course during either module take no more than 12 credits in semester-long courses; that a student taking two modular courses during a particular module take no more than four credits in semester-long courses; and that no student take three modular courses during the same module.

PINs

Students will still be using the same PIN from the initial preregistration during the spring semester. New transfer students will be assigned PINs. As usual, faculty advisors have access to PINs.

Internet access

If you do not have reliable access to the internet, please ask a trusted friend or family member to register for you during your registration time. Please remember to change your password afterward, if someone registers for you. Additional information can be found at <https://conncoll.libguides.com/studentresources/registration>.
