By the Numbers

Connecticut College in the State and Local Community
For more than 100 years, Connecticut College has called the City of New London and Connecticut home. During that time, we have cultivated strong relationships with the city and cemented our status as an economic driver for the state. We have created thousands of jobs for today’s employees while preparing our students for their future careers. Through regional partnerships, our students are working in Connecticut’s public schools, small businesses and nonprofits to solve real-world problems—truly, putting the liberal arts into action. That is why I am proud to share with you Connecticut College’s impact by the numbers.

Community Collaborations

Connecticut College and the U.S. Coast Guard Academy signed a new Memorandum of Agreement that renews and reinvigorates a nearly 40-year partnership between the two institutions. It establishes a firm commitment to continuing regular dialogue on opportunities for collaboration and continues long-standing arrangements for cross-registration of students and sharing of campus facilities.
